

The perfect beauty

Yes, that was the quickest and sure-shot measure for temporary relief.

my school principal. Yes, that was the quickest and the sure-shot measure for temporary relief. I thought deeply about it and realised that I need to do something that would make my classmates understand that what really matters is not the colour of the skin or good looks but the grey matter and the heart of a person.

I proved my worth by not only topping t in academics, but in other genres like taekwondo too! In these five years of schooling in Ghaziabad, I have won accolades and many hearts too!

Today, I have friends who call me to clear doubts in academics, request for a painting or poetry, an essay, to share jokes or just hang out. But above all, now my friends call me by my name, Karthik.

To conclude, friends, once there was somebody who commented on Dr APJ Kalam's hairdo. To this, Dr Kalam replied that what actually matters is not the hair, but what is inside the head.

Hi, I am Karthik, a southie. I took a flight along with my parents from Chennai to Delhi, when I was hardly eight. As the flight landed, the first thing that hit me hard, more than other diverse relief features of the city was the striking tone of the people. But I could never imagine what was to follow next.

When I secured a seat in one of the schools in Ghaziabad and started attending the school, there were students who would call me 'kaala', not in whispers but loud enough for the world to hear. Day by day their mockery grew and my heart bled. My parents constant support gave me the courage to handle the problem on my own.

One day, I decided to take the matter to

The civil war

Aranya Chakraborty
AIS Mayur Vihar, VIII B

Once a thief stole a car, this petty thing led to a civil war. Roosevelt sided with the thief, but Lincoln was the other army's chief.

Roosevelt said, "It was only a car the thief took, this mistake even God can overlook!" Lincoln argued, "The car he took costs 10 crore," this statement led to an uproar.

George Washington went on a fast, even the sky was overcast. John F Kennedy declared a curfew, no one was allowed till the flowers were soaked with the morning dew.

Missiles were being loaded in Russia, and all this worried the Prime Minister of India. He immediately contacted the President of Costa Rica, together they decided to fly to United States of America.

When they reached, America was completely in ruins, the whole of California was transformed into sand dunes.

Can you believe what started this war was only a petty thief who stole a car. I hope America will start anew, with this, I say thank you.

Different shades of friends

Simran Chhabra, AIS Noida, VIII C

Friends are like a rainbow colourful, they make our lives cheerful. The seven colours of a rainbow, bring happiness and wipe away sorrow.

The violet one makes us realise that our life is beautiful, and makes us feel that it will be fruitful. Indigo boosts the confidence in us to go ahead and prove our talent. Blue is forever there for us, like friends who are precious. Green makes us feel we are one of a kind, when we feel lonely, they relax our mind. Yellow adds daylight to our life, and is there to cheer us up. Red, the special one makes us complete, and is always there to support whenever we compete.

These colourful and wonderful mates come when we want to create a new colour can add to our life. with these seven colours in my life, I'll remember them always, like the rainbow with colours of life, after the long, rainy and stormy days.
