Drum into your head

During my preparation, I learned to manage expectations to avoid pressure, while maintaining confidence. I assigned specific days to specific subjects, one for theoretical and two for practical, allowing deeper focus.

Band of supporters

The list is endless; first, my parents, for their constant support. Next, Chairperson ma'am and all my teachers for never letting me lose hope and always motivating us to top the exams. She had more faith in us than we did in ourselves, which inspired me.

Play it by ear

From a young age, writing has been my strength, enabling clear communication. Therefore, I envision a creative future in authorship and a professional path in Economics, my passionate field of study.

Change your tune

My only advice to anyone appearing for these exams would be to trust their mentors. They've taught more batches than our numeric age, and it is very pertinent to listen, analyse and apply what they tell us.

Face the music

I've always described my school life as a diverse pizza, miraculously held together, weaving a tapestry of experiences and growth. The well-prepared base is my foundation, ready for the 'real' world. Leaving school is a bitter experience, but I'm curious and excited to see how my learning helps me navigate the outside world.

Music to my ears

The excitement still hasn't settled in. I was expecting good marks, but I could never imagine scoring this well.

Drum into your head

I believe consistency is crucial to score well. My parents helped me immensely in dealing with exam anxiety. Moreover, a lifelong advice from me would be to let go of your fears.

When I saw my result, I couldn't believe my eyes. For me, it was nothing less than a dream. I told my mother about my result and she was proud of me.
